U.S.-Poland Business Council Leads Sixth Mission to Warsaw

Warsaw – The US-Poland Business Council (USPBC) will lead its sixth and largest ever business mission to Warsaw on May 24 and 25. The delegation of 16 American companies will meet with senior government officials to discuss how to enhance the U.S.-Poland the economic partnership.

“Our goal this week is to work with the Government of Poland to ensure our countries continually build on the economic pillar of our alliance,” said Eric Stewart, President of the USPBC. “Open communication about priorities is essential to any strong relationship, be it personal or commercial.”

The companies participating are eager to directly contribute to stronger cooperation between the U.S. and Poland across many key industries, from health care to energy to defense.

Members of the delegation will attend meetings at ministries across the government. The U.S. Ambassador to Poland, Paul Jones, will also host a reception in honor of the visit and to promote closer economic ties between the United States and Poland.

The companies participating in the mission are Amgen, Archer Daniels Midland, Bell Helicopter, The Coca-Cola Company, General Dynamics, Invenergy, International Gaming Technologies, Koch Industries, Lockheed Martin, Motorola Solutions, Oshkosh Defense, Owens-Illinois, Parson, Raytheon, and Textron Systems.
